Personal Site Content

Brainstorm and write!

My idea for my website is a website for people who want to begin their fitness journey and people who want to further improve the knowledge they already have. My website idea will contain workout routines from experts. The website will have features that provide personalized workout plans, expert guidance, and a supportive community to keep you motivated.

I would want to start answering the following questions about my website idea:

1. Why will people come to your site? I think that most people who are fitness enthusiasts and even beginners would love the idea where you can access everything about experts. It also have expert guidance for beginners and a great community that they can have support for.

2. What questions will your visitors expect your site to answer for them? I think that my website will answer most of the visitor's questions such as 'What are some effective workout routines for beginners/intermediate/advanced individuals?' or 'What are the potential risks or precautions to consider when starting a fitness program?' and so on.

3. What types of activities will visitors want to complete on your site? I guess the type of activity that they can do on my website is that they can look at the workout routines or healthy diet plan from different experts. They can also interact with the community.

4. What information is necessary to complete any actions your site offers? I am not sure about this one yet.

5. Why will your visitors come to your site instead of another to get this information or complete the actions? There are probably thousands of websites about fitness. My plan is to have a compilation of workout routines and diet plans from different experts.

Last will be the advertisement. Some of my friends love to stay fit, so I know that they will like the website and they will also share it with their friends. Lastly, the purpose of this website is not to compete with other fitness websites but to complement them. I want people who will visit my website to have fun while learning about it.